Boring cappuccino? Boring?! I will have you know that a fine cappuccino is the greatest form of art, perfected in Italy, where people know quite a bit more about art because they are surrounded by it daily. I reject your characterization of cappuccino as "boring." In fact, in order for you to get the clues for the rest of the letter, you must apologize. Apparently the baristas here have been following our correspondence with some interest, since we have been essentially using them as mail carriers. I have informed them that you have called their delicious cappuccinos "boring" and they have strict instructions not to give you your directions until you try one and have apologized. Yes, I'm sadistic and evil. Live with it.
